

A message from Tennis Scotland's Chair, Graham Watson

As we enter 2022 with momentum gained through continued growing club memberships, a strengthening performance pathway and funding to support year-round indoor participation, Tennis Scotland has truly reached a watershed period in delivering an invaluable legacy for future generations.

Combined with securing a highest ever rate of investment to deliver the legacy, Tennis Scotland has also developed a strong workforce who are committed to achieving its mission of growing tennis through the development of welcoming and accessible environments for players of all abilities across the nation. As a result, there has never been a more important time to join our Board of Non-Executive Directors, who will be instrumental in steering the strategic direction of the organisation.

Over the next three years, the Board will play a central role in advising and supporting the Executive team, led by Tennis Scotland's Chief Executive Blane Dodds, which will include inputting into components of the strategy and monitoring ongoing performance of its delivery, as the governing body strives as one to achieve its vision of 'Tennis Opened Up'. Working closely with sportscotland and the LTA and the delivery of the Tennis Scotland facility development plans via investment of significant capital resources are instrumental in this.

As a Non-Executive Director, you can expect to work in partnership with a Chair and committed group of Board members who bring a wealth of knowledge from a range of sectors and share a passion for continuing to build on the excellent foundations laid to progress the sport in recent times, despite challenges posed by the global pandemic.

At a landmark phase for Tennis Scotland, this is your opportunity to influence the governance of an organisation tasked with capitalising on accelerating interest and participation across a nation that has become renowned for producing players who are competing at the very top of the world game.

Graham Watson,

Chair of Tennis Scotland
